To whom it may concern

I would like to thoroughly recommend the International Leadership Conference which some of our students attended last year.

As IB Diploma Coordinator I have seen that this Leadership Conference gives students an opportunity to explore all aspects of the IB Learner Profile. I have in particular seen students grow in confidence by participating in this conference, as well as being much more aware of the world that they are living in.

The students who attend the conferences cannot speak highly enough of the activities they are involved in. I enclose two comments from two different students from KGV about their views on the Conferences.

“ISLC is a gathering of extraordinarily capable students who immerse themselves in cultural exchange, lifelong friendships, and leadership theories. Even today, three years after my first participation, I still keep contact online with the many friends I have met. It has been a springboard for my self-confidence and leadership skills, giving me the strength and will-power to nominate and expose myself to the many other leadership opportunities that came my way in the future.”

“For me, almost everything I know about leadership has come from ISLC. This includes a basic framework for the different types of leaders out there and how they apply to different situations. From ISLC, I learned the importance not only of Leadership, but also of Followership, of listening to others, being able to work with others, cooperate, compromise, collaborate well. ISLC has been fun and enjoyable. I will never ever forget ISLC. I will never ever forget the people I have met at ISLC.”

These quotes speak volumes. It is hoped that other KGV students will also have an opportunity to benefit from this experience.

Yours faithfully
